With a hot pink and orange scarab, Jamie Cloud Eakin gives a nod to the Tropical Squarespot fish. She adds purple and exchanges the fish's bright yellow for gold, making the scheme more palatable for jewelry. Yellow works fine for the fish, gold works better for the humans. LIVING COLOR: The Briny Deep

by Margie Deeb

May 2008

Poet Mary Oliver writes of the ocean "This enormity, this cauldron of changing greens and blues, is the great palace of the earth."

A dazzling array of hues lurk beneath the ocean's surface, many of which we may never see. Someone with an outrageous sense of color concocted this vast realm of pastels, muted shades, vibrants, and jewel tones that sway and swim in the currents. Flash photography allows us to perceive a sea creature's true colors untinted by the veil of water through which we view it with naked eyes.

SUGGESTED PALETTES INSPIRED BY THE BRINY DEEP

193. Wrasse. Wrasse are among the most colorful fish on the planet. More than 600 species sport an amazing range of extraordinary palettes, this (right) being one of the more tame ones! Black makes a lively accent, taking the blue-to-green analogous scheme from an evocative oceanic palette to a chic color combination perfect for high fashion. Delicas: DB-215, DB-793, DB-787, DB-724, DB-010
